I Am Not A Christian I AM That I AM

From Genesis To Revelation

At the genesis of man, the soul emerged, a powerful entity that transcends the human mind. It possesses the ability to create, shaping a living soul in the image and likeness of its creator. This creation process, a manifestation of our thoughts and imagination, is brought to life through concentration and spoken into existence. When the anointing resonates with our soul, we explore deep thought or meditation, harnessing our imagination to manifest our desires.

God's creation of the universe demonstrates the power of focus and spoken word. As spiritual beings, we have the capacity to operate with the same authority and abilities. The spiritual connection begins to merge with the natural, and we become universal, able to control the natural with the spiritual. It takes practice and dedication, but it is possible. The spiritual mindset we develop as we evolve mentally is where magic happens. Life will never get easy, but spirituality expands our wisdom. We receive insight and build trust in our intuition.

We witness how fast God works in our lives, like the speed of light emerging from the darkness. The fact that the Bible drives the point of being the light of the world should draw you closer to possessing the anointing of Christ in your heart and mind, energizing the power within your soul. Being a child of God works on the same principles as the natural world. We inherit our parent's DNA and genetics, giving us the same characteristics, traits, personalities, etc. You will be amazed at what you'll be capable of doing with the wisdom of the Spirit.

The spiritual world and the natural world may appear similar to those who don't understand their contrast, but they are fundamentally different. They operate with opposing forces, each deriving power from distinct sources. In the spiritual world, power emanates from God, who demonstrates strength and empathy. In the natural world, power stems from the Ego, which exhibits strength and sympathy. While these differences may not be immediately apparent, a closer look reveals their unique characteristics. God's power works in conjunction with the world because empathy allows us to put ourselves in someone else's shoes, strengthening each other in unison. Ego's power works like segregation. To sympathize with someone doesn't allow us to share feelings; it only separates the strong from the weak. You end up wishing the other person well and leaving them to fend for themselves, bringing up feelings of loneliness.

As we develop spirituality, we also fortify our connections with others and ourselves. Personal growth is a transformative journey that commences from within. As we evolve spiritually, we gain a deeper understanding of ourselves and gain control over our actions. When one person sets foot on this path, others are inevitably drawn to it, experiencing the profound and transformative power of spirituality for themselves. This is the natural order of things, a testament to the immense power of personal growth and spiritual evolution.

We develop wisdom, knowledge, and understanding with the principle of the power of three. The Bible expresses that the greatest of these is understanding. The knowledge we should attain is to understand when the Spirit is providing us with wisdom and then understand what to do with the knowledge. The growth of our spiritual abilities strengthens our mental and physical attributes, allowing us to become more successful in life. The Bible tells us to meditate day and night so we can obtain success. Maintaining focus is a critical part of living spiritually, thereby not letting anything deter us from our manifestation of faith. Developing a solid belief system requires dedication and perseverance, which will challenge your faith in God and test your patience to achieve your breakthrough. We must all confront the darkness and focus on the Light until our destiny becomes vivid enough to manifest our reality. The concept is to allow our meditation to take us into our Genesis center, get a Revelation from God, and transmute it into materiality. The Spirit strengthens us mentally by giving us the capacity to believe we can do anything. God uses our hearts and minds for this because they produce electromagnetic fields that the power of concentration can amplify. This mindset propels us past our physical abilities when we begin to take on our dreams and achieve new goals.

Meditation leads to the soul when it comes to being a visionary. The objective is to focus on your heartbeat until you sense the rhythm of it, then sync your breath with deep breathing. Before entering your meditation, jot down some questions you would like answers to and focus on one of them before your breathwork. First, take slow breaths and hold for a few seconds, then release the breaths twice as long as inhaled. This technique will create heart and soul synchronicity, and we enter our Genesis center where stillness and the peace that transcends understanding reside. Once this transformation happens, you will reach the Revelation phase, when visions, thoughts, and dreams arise. Keeping a journal of your experiences will be your best guide for remembering your encounters. Your visions will be more vivid the more you practice this meditation.

Another form of meditation to practice is mindfulness. With this technique, you develop a deep awareness of your environment, emotions, and body as you go about your day. The way to experience mindfulness is not to have present judgment, but to perceive things as they are without a label attached. Life becomes more adaptable and less problematic when we live this way.

Becoming a visionary helps make better decisions by increasing spiritual discernment and decreasing the wandering mind to create laser focus in the natural world.

Prepare for tests and trials when you decide to go on your spiritual journey. Those who become anointed with the Spirit will face some complex challenges. This part is learning to connect your mind, body, and soul. You've probably been only using mind and body up until this point. The question is,

"What's been influencing your mind?" Your Ego, if not the soul. The soul embodies the Spirit of God and provides wisdom to the mind, which controls our bodies. Our soul holds the mind accountable for the actions of our body, and we have to face judgment by our souls, which is why the Bible tells us to repent daily. We need accountability to be righteous; this is why only a few are chosen to carry the anointing.

When we are called to ministry, there can't be any fear or doubt. Fear keeps us from reaching our breakthroughs. Doubt diminishes belief and leads us to question or relinquish our faith. Strengthening our spiritual abilities overcomes fear and doubt, strengthening our mental accountability.

When spirituality reinforces our mental prowess, we begin to see the possibilities in situations from an optimistic point of view without fear or doubt and start to visualize outcomes. Our belief system grows each time we get an opportunity to take on new challenges, which makes our mind, body, and soul connection resilient. We take our mental accountability to new levels every step of the journey.

Love is the most powerful force in the universe. Even though it cannot be physically touched, it can be felt and seen. It motivates us to do anything, even if it seems impossible. The source of this energy is within our hearts, which produce the most expansive electromagnetic field in our bodies. People can feel, hear, and see when we have our heart in something. There is no hiding the truth. Our heartfelt connection to something will attract it to us. We should always remember to have love at the forefront of the motive for whatever we set out to do in life. Love will motivate you to do anything, even if it seems impossible. There's no stopping it! Your heart is the first place to check if life isn't going your way. The Bible states that "God so loved the world," people feel that love so strongly that they seek it out daily to fill their souls with it and feel revived and alive. Once you experience this feeling, you won't want to return to how you used to be. Love builds a thirst in us that we want to pass on to others so they can encounter the joy it brings. When we get filled with the Spirit, we resonate with the vibration of love to the point that people start recognizing our joyous demeanor and witnessing the blessings that pour into our lives. God's love is abundant in the universe, and all we have to do is seek out the Kingdom of Heaven, as the Bible so eloquently puts it, to have love added to our lives. We can make a world of difference by loving ourselves and showing others that the way to adoration and worship begins within our hearts.

The exciting part of the journey is when empathy sets higher than ever, and your level of respect changes. First, it starts internally, and you develop new expectations of yourself; then, it spreads outwardly, and you start having fewer expectations for others. You begin to understand the power within you and learn to control your emotions better because you realize that people operate at their highest degree of wisdom and awareness, which creates their outlook of respect.

The spiritual world doesn't require us to be respecters of people. We respect people's gifts of discipline and restraint. Holding yourself accountable for your actions without blaming someone else for the change in your emotional state takes great responsibility. I am that I am because of the Spirit of God inside of me, able to control my internal environment. In the natural world, we find people who blame others for their emotional outbreaks and rollercoasters. There needs to be an understanding that the cause and cure to their problems is themselves. Self-control is a byproduct of selfrespect.

Respect needs the necessary attention to improve the environment for our families, school system, workplace, and social groups. Take note of how you feel inside right now and make the necessary adjustments to get your spiritual mindset back in order.

What warrants a person the right to pass judgement on another? Have we decided that our way is the only way or the right way? These questions need to be answered before making our accusations verbal. For us to come to conclusions before analyzing someone's body language, choice of words, and eye contact is a misfortune to the person we're engaging or judging. The Bible tells us that what we do to others will be done to us in return. What do we have to gain from speaking negative about others? It would be better to evaluate ourselves before pronouncing someone else as problematic.

To be a Christian is to be Christlike, exemplifying His Spirit. People get caught up in the title rather than the Spirit. Some call themselves believers, others children of God. If you don't hold yourself to the standard, don't take on the name and degrade the reputation of the saints. We squander the opportunity to have another person to be converted into the spiritual bliss, escaping the suffering of the natural world by being a person's judge and jury.

The Bible was written to cleanse ourselves and justify our soul's righteousness to God. We are the chosen ones to edify the body of Christ. It's time to make an impact on the natural world with your spiritual gifts. Let go of your title and become the Light you were called to be.
